particularly happy in dealing with the shipping industry. Apart from unsuccessful efforts to develop the national mercantile marine, in order to take advantage of the European situation, the seamen's act, which comes into operation in November next, is, for instance, a conspicuous example of an irritating policy, the consequences of which may be much more serious than most members of Congress anticipate. Already, in fact, no fewer than twenty-one countries have been notified of the intention that are in conflict with the measure. and, so far as American maritime trade is concerned, it is believed that the Stars and Stripes will disappear from the Pacific, except along the western seaboard of the republic, and that Jananese steamship lines will to a very large extent monopolize transoceanic traffic.
